

---

ABSTRACT

This invention relates to a connection device for providing a connection between an electrical cable terminated by a plug and electrically insulated wires. It has application, for example, in telecommunications where a telephone instrument is connected by a lead with an appropriate plug to a jack provided in a wall panel. The jack requires connection to telephone wires on the opposite side of the wall panel.

1